FOREST VIEW

There was a reunion given at the home of Cecil Nash on Aug. 14, in honor of his father, T. J. Nash, who is 75 years old, and has six children living who are Cecil, W. T., L. E. and Berkeley Nash, of this county, Mrs. Hunter Woolridge, of Lynchburg, Mrs. J. D. Evans, of Concord, Va. He also has 29 grandchildren living. There was a large crowd of friends present. At noon they were marched to the spring, where a long table was spread beneath the shade of the big trees loaded down with good things to eat. It being a steaming hot day Mr. Nash had prepared a barrel of ice lemonade at one end of the table and a barrel of ice water at the other. So there was nothing to do but eat, drink and keep cool. Everyone left hoping Mr. Nash would be present at many more reunions.

The big rains we had on the Sunday following did great damage to the crops, noting them as all being green, gullies in the land. Water in the streams was higher than it had been for years.

Mr. Leslie Morris has rented a fine farm about three miles from Farmville, and will move during the winter. Messrs Z. M. Jones and Walter Jones are doing some carpenter work for him now. We do hope to give up this good family as neighbors and hope their move will be a successful one.

Miss Eula Chatham is very sick, hope she will soon be on again.

Mr. Elisha Jones, of Richmond, is visiting his home folks. Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Nash, and children, of Richmond, are at his father's home.

Miss Emma Woolridge has returned home after spending two weeks with her aunt, Mrs. Jesse Evans, of Concord.

Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Martin, and daughter, Thelma, of McKeese Rock, Pa., visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Martin last week, and on Thursday p. m. Mrs. Martin served ice cream, the family of B. C. Sims and J. A. Martin and wife being present.

Mrs. Elsie Moses is suffering with Erysipelas again.

Misses Canada near Union Hill, Mary Overton, of Brookneal, Va., Kathleen Pickett, of Naruna, Va., and Francis Ford visited Bernice Ford recently.

Mrs. J. E. Martin, of Roanoke, spent the last ten days with her brother, A. S. Woolridge, returning home last Monday.

Mrs. A. S. Woolridge and Mrs. J. E. Martin visited in the home of J. A. Martin last week.

Christine Agee, Vorta, and Nellie Sims spent last Thursday night with Mrs. J. A. Martin.

Miss Maggie Nash is very ill at her home at High View. We hope she will soon be out again.

Mr. and Mrs. Delwin Harvey, Mrs. Len Powell, and two children, of Roanoke; Mr. and Mrs. Everett Ferguson, and baby, Mrs. and Mrs. J. A. Martin, Misses Bessie Martin and Mildred Sims visited in the home of W. T. Nash last Sunday.

"Select a Good Rooster for Your Home Flock at the Fair"

This is the slogan being used by officials in charge of the poultry show to be staged at the Appomattox County Fair.

Encouraged by the success of the campaign carried on by the livestock interests to place purebred birds at the head of all herds, the poultry fanciers have decided to put on a like campaign in an effort to increase the value of the American hen. Doubling the output of meat and eggs in this locality in the next few years through the use of purebred roosters to head farm flocks is the goal of leading poultry breeders.

"A hen ordinarily lays about 150 eggs during the year," says B. G. Anderson, chairman of the committee in charge of the poultry show. "A bird of good breeding will lay about 250 eggs in a year, nearly twice as many as are laid by the scrub hen. The most economical way of improving a scrub flock is by putting purebred roosters at the head. If new roosters were brought each year, there would be little scrub blood left in two or three years. By that time a purebred flock is generally wanted and obtained."

Culling will also be emphasized at the show. The value of good roosters will not only be stressed, but the necessity of weeding out by selection inferior hens will be well voiced throughout the campaign.

All of the leading varieties of American, Asiatic, Mediterranean, French, Dutch, English and Bantam breeds will be displayed at the fair.

Special attention is being given the practical side of poultry raising by officials in charge of the poultry show at the Appomattox County Fair, in an effort to encourage more small breeders to exhibit at the fair.

"It is not a difficult task to get a chicken ready for the show ring," says Anderson, chairman of the committee in charge of the poultry department. "If birds are given lots of ground to keep them in fine physical shape, and are kept free from lice and disease, the battle has been won. Only a little extra care is necessary the last few days to put them in show shape. If breeders only knew how easy it was to get birds ready for exhibition, we wouldn't be able to house the entries."

A majority of the many distinct breeds of poultry raised in this country will be on display at the fair. It will be an easy matter to pick out the young birds in display, marked by their angular, awkward appearance, short, scant dress. They will outnumber the older birds, but here and there an old rooster or hen, larger and more finished in looks, will poke a friendly head through the bars to attract the attention of passer-by. The usual number of ducks, geese and turkeys will be shown, and add novel note to the exhibit.

Peroxidized roosters and hens, most home from parts of this locality will be rounded up for their trip to the big poultry show to be staged at the Appomattox County Fair.

Dainty cows are being manured, legs polished, and snow-white, jet-black, red and various colored feathers receiving their final touches. Professional poultry exhibitors prepare their birds for exhibits in many of the following ways, but I do not advise to do much.

By bleaching up all white birds with peroxide, and whitening with bluing, and adding talcum powder to cover cream colored spots.

Shaping up all birds, fluffing out hollows and pressing down spots too well filled out.

Washing once and twice daily. Carefully drying all birds with electric fans.

Arranging each feather separately, and pressing each one into its place.

Tidying beaks and claws fastidiously.

Coloring red birds with henna. Feeding oily food, so that the body will secrete an oil to oil their feathers and then rub the down each bird at least once a day with silk cloth to bring out the sheen.

Jackson-Farmer

A very quiet marriage was solemnized Aug. 18th in the home of Mrs. J. A. Garrett, when her sister, Miss Alice Farmer, became the bride of Mr. Jno. W. Jackson. After the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. Burnette, a splendid dinner was served. They left to tour through the valley of Virginia and other points of interest. We wish them much happiness. They expect to make their home in Glen Allen, Va.
